- ▶ The new organization replaced an informal and obscure organization maintained by the previous Director, Floyd Thompson, whose organization philosophy was to make “it hard for outsiders to know exactly what was going on inside the laboratory, thereby making it harder for them to exploit or manipulate its resources”.

- ▶ The Langley Personnel Director, Townsend Johnson, replied: "Well, Mr. Cortright, we're sort of partial to southern boys."

► Dr. John Duberg [Langley's Chief Scientist and responsible for ICASE]... deserves a great deal of credit for his vision [on how to fund the institute]. We started out with core funding that was not at the expense of the Langley staff, at least not directly. The money flowed from NASA Headquarters with few strings. Thus if we wanted to explore a technical area or to interact with Langley researchers, we did not have to approach with our hand out. In fact, for several years there was no mechanism for Langley staff to provide direct support for activities at the institute.
